I discovered the Mevo live switching / live stream camera in January 2016 when its manufacturer introduced it and offered it at half price. I took advantage of this preorder offer. It arrived in the mail two days before we left for the Olympic ministry trip. I was able to play with it a little on the way to Rio and was able to record several of the evening sessions before it was stolen from the hotel. I was able to introduce the Mevo camera to several team members before it was stolen: but, with much disappointment, I was unable to actually do a live test of the device. After returning from Rio, one of the team members purchased a Mevo camera, realized he didn’t need it, and shipped it to me. In his words, “You will use this much more than I will.” Praise God for providing this tool for us to use and share. It was valuable on my trip to Slovenia.

The Mevo is a 4k camera that connects to an iOS device to be able to “switch” from sections in the viewing area. This simulates an iOS device to be able to “switch” from camera to camera or LiveStream.com. While in Slovenia, I was able to stream on facebook an entire evening service and had 100 viewers. I also recorded several workshops and main sessions for the missionaries to access after the conference. The Mevo app is extremely easy to use and has the ability to transfer right to an iPhone / iPad from the camera. Plus, a bonus is the ability to input from a sound board directly into the iPhone to have quality sound input, which I have not yet been able to test.

SO TechMin covered the $1,400 expenses for airfare and hotel. It was a joy to have Joshua Huang with me as well. He came to photograph the conference and take family portraits for the missionaries. He is a true servant and gave of his time and money to help in this. You can see Joshua’s photos on our Facebook! Here are some kind words from the conference director:

“Thanks so much for your tireless efforts in helping to make our Regional Conference in Slovenia a success. Your willingness to assist in so many aspects was certainly of great value to me as the conference coordinator, but more importantly you were a vital resource to our teams. From the workshop you presented on the various aspects of technology, to overseeing the video/projection during our group sessions and more, you served us well and we look forward to the next time!”

Dear Brother Chris Brown:

I am thankful to God that you have agreed to give me a gift of a laptop. I really need it for ministry back home in Liberia. May God give you in twofold in return of your goodness to promote my ministry and the work of the Lord in Africa, Liberia. I thank you so much, words are inadequate to express the joy of my heart as I wait to see the gift.

For the record, I am taking this verse out of context: Ephesians 4:12 refers to equipping the saints for the ministry. We at TechMin have a passion to equip those in ministry with technology tools. I know this is not what the verse means, but it still is meaningful to give technology tools to those in ministry. We were able to give away a laptop and an iPad. I was contacted by one of our board members about a need for a pastor from Liberia who was in the states for the GARBC conference. Even though he had never had a computer of his own, he recognized the value computers can have in ministry, even in Liberia. We quickly looked around for a good laptop to give him and were able to find a decent one for around $400. We did not hesitate to buy it, even though we hadn’t raised the funds for an opportunity like this. He would be traveling back to Africa soon, so we had little time to get him one. Upon hearing that we would be able to give him a brand new laptop, he wrote this:

I appreciated your generosity greatly. I always explained to everyone that you made sure the Americans always had high quality laptops. I explained that your generosity was a spirit of generosity. I will never forget your generosity or why you gave me a second chance in the computer world. I know that I have a duty to God to help others in the ministry. I will always remember the generosity you showed as I attempt to give back to the community. I want to show that it is possible to help others in their need. I will always remember your generosity.

Please Help:

For those who wish to give to this cause, please visit TechMin.org/Donate then please visit www.techmin.org/donate and hep us help others.

We at TechMin have a passion to equip those in ministry with technology tools. I know this is not what the verse means, but it still is meaningful to give technology tools to those in ministry. We were able to give away a laptop and an iPad. I was contacted by one of our board members about a need for a pastor from Liberia who was in the states for the GARBC conference. Even though he had never had a computer of his own, he recognized the value computers can have in ministry, even in Liberia. We quickly looked around for a good laptop to give him and were able to find a decent one for around $400. We did not hesitate to buy it, even though we hadn’t raised the funds for an opportunity like this. He would be traveling back to Africa soon, so we had little time to get him one. Upon hearing that we would be able to give him a brand new laptop, he wrote this:

Dear Brother Chris Brown:

I am thankful to God that you have agreed to give me a gift of a laptop. I really need it for ministry back home in Liberia. May God give you in twofold in return of your goodness to promote my ministry and the work of the Lord in Africa, Liberia. I thank you so much, words are inadequate to express the joy of my heart as I wait to see the gift.

For the record, I am taking this verse out of context: Ephesians 4:12 refers to equipping the saints for the ministry. We at TechMin have a passion to equip those in ministry with technology tools. I know this is not what the verse means, but it still is meaningful to give technology tools to those in ministry. We were able to give away a laptop and an iPad. I was contacted by one of our board members about a need for a pastor from Liberia who was in the states for the GARBC conference. Even though he had never had a computer of his own, he recognized the value computers can have in ministry, even in Liberia. We quickly looked around for a good laptop to give him and were able to find a decent one for around $400. We did not hesitate to buy it, even though we hadn’t raised the funds for an opportunity like this. He would be traveling back to Africa soon, so we had little time to assist him. Upon hearing that we would be able to give him a brand new laptop, he wrote this:

Dear Brother Chris Brown:

I am thankful to God that you have agreed to give me a gift of a laptop. I really need it for ministry back home in Liberia. May God give you in twofold in return of your goodness to promote my ministry and the work of the Lord in Africa, Liberia. I thank you so much, words are inadequate to express the joy of my heart as I wait to see the gift.